However, that general rule comes out of the window if the ring is not set in the center of the sand. Check the sand design beforeYour purchase to make sure you know where the ring is. In general, buying tickets in person or by phone is not the best way to get good seats. To get the tickets as soon as they go out for sale, it's better to buy them on your computer. Have your credit card and email information set up on the Ticketmaster website. You only have a few minutes to complete your ticketmaster transaction and it would be horrible to lose excellent seats because your information was not written. Another suggestion is to have multiple open browser windows and continue refreshing as the time for pre-sales approaches. You never know exactly when Ticketmaster will throw tickets for the event and the sooner you are on the system, the better seats you will have. Do not buy tickets that you are not happy with unless there is a great opportunity, the event will run out quickly. You still have several shots to catch excellent tickets. Refer to a few hours and for the next few days. If someone else ruined your billing information or your card was rejected, those seats are back on sale. If you are not happy yet, wait for the pre-sales to finish and try again when tickets are available to the general public. The same rules apply before and in the previous step. If you've followed these steps and you can't get a big seat yet, you can still be lucky. These strategies can work: check with Ticketmaster the week of the program. Due to changes in sand settings and returns to special compound promotional seats, some excellent seats may be available as you approach the ring time. This strategy works in sands that usually do not sell television tapes. In this case, wait as long as possible to buy your tickets; you must make sure you have somehet worst seats in the house, not just a bad section, but in a really bad row, lucky in a seat with just a partial view of the ring!
